Fancy Variations of Velvet Coming to the Front and the Old-Time Short Napped Velvet Again Reinstated.

Two Distinct Types In Skirts. Narrow Gores of the Walking Skirt.

New York, Sept. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The fabric of the season is velvet, not alone because with which we were all but sufficed last winter, but fancy variations of velvet are coming conspicuously to the front, and the regulation old-time short napped velvet is again reinstated and welcomed with overwhelming enthusiasm.

Certainly there is no more beautiful material for cold weather, its rich, warm lustre, deep mysterious shadows and fascinating high lights give it a variety and charm that no other material can boast; there is, too, an alluring look of luxurious comfort about its soft furry surface that makes it irresistible to the feminine heart.

Not only are these costly fabrics to be lavishly used as trimming, and in combination with cloths and other materials, but for occasional occasions, such as calling, reception and afternoon toilettes, it is the main material. Coats and hats also are to be entirely of velvet—though for coats velvet is to be reserved strictly for dress, and not to be

SMART AUTUMN WALKING HATS.

The somewhat rolling and wide brim seems to be the prevailing fall style in hats, and is seen both with low and high crowns. In this little model of tan felt, which is trimmed with a cocky eagle's feather and a band of tan silk, we have a hat that is typical of the present style.

A walking gown which may do service at golf, out ing or for rainy days, is now indispensable, and is to be worn daily upon the street. These must not be confused with the tailor models, but even these often have large velvet reverses, strapings and fancy buttons to relieve their plainness and make them more in keeping with the fanciful modes.

Among the colors which are to lead in velvets, are also other fabrics, Russian green deserves first mention as the distinctively new fall shade. This color is peculiarly rich and brilliant in velvets, and is used with smart effect for the blouse jacket which follows the Russian cut. Blouses of Russian green velvet, with trimmings of chinchilla, sable and baby lamb are so far the most chic and Frenchy models that have been seen.

Other colors are green, brown, castor, grey, blue, cardinal and black. Black, indeed, seems to have a new impetus

BUTTON TRIMMED BLOUSE.

This charmingly novel blouse of red cloth which is held in a number of small lace-pleats and dotted with buttons of the same color, is one of the new season's and promises to gain a quick popularity.

THE LONG COAT FOR AUTUMN.

We here have two examples of the long automobile coat which promise to hold their own in the coming season. The first is of pale tan cloth heavily strapped and showing a large collar and is framed in the cloth strapings and embroidered with rich effect in tan and red silk. The second coat is of brown cloth, the fullness of the back being held in a row of buttons, as is also the yoke, which is outlined by a Russian sable bias. The short-waisted empire effect is observed in both of these models.

worn for the street or in combination with shopping or walking skirts.

There is a cruel disregard for the frugal-minded woman this season, as the fashions seem even more extravagant than those of the spring and summer. Even most every day suits of chevot and golf cloth show expensive and all too perishable trimmings of velvet and panne.

At a recent display of fall styles at one of New York's most progressive and reliable emporiums of fashion, velvet was in evidence upon everything. There were charming, decolete evening frocks of pale luminous colors entirely in velvet, blouse jackets of Russian green, black and brown velvet, and golf gowns and walking suits generously ornamented with shaped velvet flouncings and strapings of panne. We illustrate this week two typical examples of the way in which velvet and panne are interlarded upon these utility suits.

Speaking of walking and golf suits brings me to a very important fact of the present fashions and that is the change which has come over the spirit of the tailor gown. It is no longer the piece-stem affair of relentless seam and compact stitching, designed for steady wear for the street, traveling, shopping and walking, and guileless of all ornamentation, but nowadays it fills the place of "second best" being ruthlessly crowded from its original position by the short and narrow skirted outing and walking frocks.

The regular tailor skirt, well known, is immured from the edict which declares that street gowns are to be clear ground all around, and it still rejoices in the dignity of a slight train.

The new tailor gown whose style has become decidedly ornate and elaborated, and is constantly seen to compose the smartest models in jackets, long coats and tulle gowns. The caprice for gilt buttons and braid brings black into prominence one more, as there is no more effective background for this gray trimming.

White and black, also, which never fails to be both striking and elegant, is to be much used.

We greet the news from Paris that the this delicious shade was displayed last week among most recent importations of one of our largest establishments. It was of broad cloth, cut double-breasted, and showed a pretty double row of pearl buttons, which were pleasing in tone, with the color of the jacket. The reverses and collar were faced with velvet of a somewhat darker and browner shade. The wide girde over which the jacket touched was of the same velvet shaped in a point in front.

There are two distinct types in skirts, one with the shaped flounce at the bottom and the other with the long tulle. The tulle is used upon tailor gowns and costumes of a rather dressy order. It frequently appears over an underskirt of a similar shade of velvet or silk, and always on a gown which is long and has a slight train. Some models show the tulle quite short in the front in the style of a tulle, but more generally the skirt is rounded in a graceful outline, back and front, and sometimes are slightly draped at one side.

Many of these things are cut in one piece, with the waist in princess style, the underskirt being of the same color, and of a contrasting material.

The shaped flounce, however, is worn entirely upon short round skirts, and as the new walking skirts are very narrow, this shaped flounce is often added to give the necessary flare at the bottom of the skirt.

It is very varied, sometimes plain, but often made in broad pleats or gathered. The model golf gown we illustrate is an excellent example of the use of the shaped flounce. In this skirt the flounce is of black velvet, which is a decided innovation, and shows what a craze there is for velvet upon everything, but these shaped flouncings are frequently of the same material as the skirt, and are infinitely more adapted for wear and tear and had weather than those of velvet. Very narrow gores gores, and many of them characterize the walking skirt, as for the fashionable materials, it is hard to say where the limit is to come. All varieties of materials are brought out for the fall, camel's hair and other nappy materials with up-standing hairs, are shown as well as smooth faced cloths, chevrons, chevrons and soft velvets are also shown, but it begins to look as if we were going to carry out the French custom of wearing the same material for winter and summer. Certainly crepons, crepe de chine, velvets and even foulards will be worn late into the winter, and gowns of these materials are always charming for the theater, luncheon, teas and dressy occasions.

Flourescent silks are to be conspicuously popular, and in combinations with the various velvets which are shown, they are particularly beautiful and rich.

Change of Life

These Women were Helped Through Woman's Great Crisis by Mrs. Pinkham—All Middle-Aged Women Should Read Their Letters.

Nine Years of Suffering

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—When I first wrote to you, I was in a very bad condition. I was passing through the change of life, and the doctors said I had bladder and liver trouble. I had suffered for nine years. Doctors failed to do me any good. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, my health has improved very much. I will gladly recommend your medicine to others and am sure that it will prove as great a blessing to them as it has to me."—Mrs. Geo. H. JUNE, 901 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Relief Came Promptly

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I had been under treatment with the doctors for four years, and seemed to get no better. I thought I would try your medicine. My trouble was change of life, and I must say that I never had anything help me so much as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Relief came almost immediately. I have better health now than I ever had. I feel like a new woman, perfectly strong. I give Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound all the credit, and would not go without your medicine for anything. I have recommended it to several of my friends. There is no need of women suffering so much. For Mrs. Pinkham's remedies are a sure cure."—MAHALA BUTLER, Bridgewater, Ill.

No woman is so healthy but at this crisis in her life she needs advice and help from the most competent source. Mrs. Pinkham will advise such women without charge or request.

LOTS MORE LIKE IT.

Plenty more proof like this and all from Duluth people. No chance for argument here. No better proof can be had. What a Duluth man says is the best of evidence for Duluth. Read this case. We have lots more like it.

Mr. G. Henry Lesage, of 731 Second street west, with offices in 401 Palladium building, says: "As a result of a cold settling in my kidneys I suffered for a long time with heavy, dull aching pain across the small of my back. Plasters and other remedies seemed to relieve me temporarily but did not remove the trouble. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I determined to try them, and procured a box at the Duluth Drug company and used them. A few days sufficed to entirely remove the trouble, and since that time I have had no bother at all. I now rest well at night and rise in the morning feeling refreshed."

A woman as a horse dealer is a novelty, even in this day, when Josh Billings says that "women are everywhere." In Duluth, Miss Charlotte M. The Burning Of Moscow

Sunday the Eighty-Eighth Anniversary of Russia's Great Surprise That Checkmated Napoleon.

And all the army of the children, which was with the commander of the troops, broke down the walls of Jerusalem round about.

And the king's house, and the houses of Jerusalem, and every house he burnt with fire.—Kings.

Russia's recent move in the great international chess game now being played in China, by suggesting that she should join her in a thing from Peking, was one of the greatest surprises of this period of astounding surprises.

That her motives are not what they are said to be are fully justified in suspecting. That she is satisfied with rescuing her neighbor and honest neighbor, China, are conditions so absolutely without precedent in her way of doing things that one should find fault with her for believing that she objects to the cutting up of the last of the empire, and solely because there are too many, ravaging guests at the table. And, by the way, it is not for a moment that she is most anxious to be rid of the very first to arise with her and express a perfect willingness, a desire, to leave that crowded table.

Whatever her motives and whatever the results of that move, it certainly is a pivotal one and completely changes the history of the present from the way one might have expected that history's sequence would run.

But it is not the first time that Russia's move has been completely unexpected. It is not the first time that she has been assigned a star role. In fact, she may be depended upon to supply the cue for the stars and to her very minor turn, but just at the worst moment, when no one is expecting it, she will appear, and she will appear in a way that will make the world gasp.

the Kremlin—it was undoubtedly the French or some Russian pillagers who started it. But then he concedes that the guards of the Kremlin, remembering the old Russian rule: "Leave nothing to the enemy," took the city by storm, and that was most religiously observed from Smolensk to Moscow. Leaving Moscow with his son on the morning of the flight, he said to him sadly: "Look back, my son, one more glimpse at our beautiful city. Then see it for the last time in half an hour it will be in flames."

In 1812 Vorenka, a police officer, testified that the governor had ordered him at 1 o'clock on the morning of the 15th, to go to the custom house, the alcohol warehouses and other public buildings, and prepare them so that he and his aids could set the city on fire at that hour. And, in the morning, they saw the enemy coming. He swore he executed that order at 10 that night, swam his horse across the Moskova at 11 the following night, when the fire was well under way, and rejoined Kutusoff's headquarters at 2 the following morning.

No doubt the example so set by the government was emulated, if not surpassed, by the people. The latter, particularly, the populace, with nothing much to lose and a victory to gain over the common foe, the French, had a chance to get even with their old persecutors, their own nobles, whose palaces in many cases had been specially interesting to despoil and then burn—to save them from Napoleon.

That had been the intention, to burn the city, as about the only effective strategic opposition the Russians could expect from the French. From the fact that not an entrenchment was dug, nor a cannon placed or a barricade built in its place. And, finally, the Russians were not slow in that sort of thing, nor lacking in military knowledge or in bravery for that matter. In fact, the destruction of the city was a sacrifice for it was a terrible sacrifice, and a splendid proof of their military skill. A London ladies' club, the famous New Victorian, to which American women have been introduced when they are lucky enough to have friends in London lately gave an entertainment, called a "play tea," that turned out to be a very jolly refreshing affair, says a Boston paper. By the title it was supposed everybody was expected to play, but it soon appeared that the majority was

He was sitting in a chair when the portrait was finished the sitter did not seem satisfied with it. You would have thought that the artist, after sitting confessed that he did not, and said in self-justification, 'you must not

THE CRIMINAL CASES.

Trial Is Taken Up in the District Court.

Judge Cant took up the trial of criminal cases in district court this morning, and the first one on the docket for trial was the case of William A. Maloney, a variety actor, who is charged with grand larceny in the first degree. The grand jury's allegations are to the effect that on July 26 Maloney stole a gold piece of the value of $10 and a small purse from one John Lindstrom, in the saloon of Peter John, at the corner of Second avenue west and First street. The charge is that he took it from the person of the complaining witness, and this constitutes the offense of grand larceny in the first degree. A jury was drawn this morning and the case was in progress at noon.

Judge Cant will probably try only this one criminal case. Judge Englin, who is now engaged in hearing a civil case, will take up the criminal calendar as soon as he is through with the case on hand now.

This morning several prisoners were arranged to plead. William Rankin pleaded not guilty to the charge of grand larceny in the first degree. Rankin, accused of destroying personal property, said when asked if she was ready to plead that she would prefer to wait until her attorney was present. Judge Englin entered a plea of not guilty for her with the understanding that her attorney could withdraw it if she wanted to. Julius McNell pleaded not guilty to charges of burglary in the third degree and grand larceny in the second degree. Eric Johnson was given an attorney and will plead tomorrow.

The District Court.

Judge Englin in district court this morning was still hearing the "cow case" of Thomas W. Smith against John Smith, but at noon the arguments to the jury were in progress and it was expected that the case would go to the jury late this afternoon.

In Judge Englin's court the case of James McElroy by his guardian against Mitchell & McClure was still on. Since Friday the attorneys have been arguing a motion made by the defendant to direct a verdict in their favor. The argument was still on when court adjourned at noon.

No court cases were taken up this morning, but seven of the cases on the day's call were continued over the term.

Street Railway Company
Reaches Agreement in Lake
Avenue Accident Suits.

TERMS AGREED UPON

Finlayson Estate Gets $2391.
38, Twaddle Estate $1000
and Warren $1253.16.

The four personal injury cases growing out of the collision between a street car and a hook and ladder truck, at the corner of Lake avenue and Superior street, Sept. 7, 1898, have all been settled, and each of the plaintiffs gets something out of their actions.

In the accident two firemen, Archibald Finlayson and Arthur Twaddle, were killed, and two others, Charles Warren and Dan A. Cameron, were injured. Suits against the Duluth Street Railway company resulted in all of them, and out of the various suits there were ten trials. In three there were verdicts three for the plaintiffs and two for the defendants, and disagreements resulted from the other five trials. The only case in which a verdict was not secured was the Twaddle case, which was pending for trial at this time.

Saturday L. Mendenhall, receiver for the Duluth Street Railway company, applied to the court for an order to settle all of the cases, except the Cameron case, which had already been settled. He set forth in his petition the fact that a number of trials had been had, and gave it as his belief that money would be saved by settling.

The court granted the petition, and the cases were settled. The Twaddle case, which was pending for trial at this time, was settled for $2391. The Cameron case, which was pending for trial at this time, was settled for $1000. The Warren case, which was pending for trial at this time, was settled for $1253.16.

Judge Cant signed the order permitting the settlement, and authorizing the receiver to pay the claims out of certain funds that were set aside for receivers' liabilities, which the receivership was wound up a short time ago. In the Finlayson case there was a verdict for $2391, and with the other amounts is $2945. This will be paid in full.

In the Twaddle case, which is for $2000, no verdict has been secured, and the case will be settled for $1000. In the Warren case there was a verdict for $1000, and costs will be added to it. The case will be settled for $1253.16.

John J. Baldwin was attorney in the Finlayson and Twaddle cases, and today by A. H. Koch, and E. C. Richter, representing Philadelphia; C. S. Hatcher and Joseph D. O'Brien, representing Chicago; J. H. Johnson and Harry Goldman, representing Baltimore; and J. A. Nelson, representing St. Paul. O'Brien has a proxy from George J. Decker and George D. Shafter, of St. Louis, and a certified check to take care of its financial end. Thomas F. McCarthy, of Boston, acted as referee today.

Nothing was done this morning, but the delay after the new organization is to be called the National Association of Lumbermen, which will be organized in the city of Duluth. The association will be organized in the city of Duluth. The association will be organized in the city of Duluth.

There is every indication that the state board of equalization contemplate the raising of the assessment on the lumber and logs owned in the state, just how far this will affect the lumber interests of the Northwest is not definitely known as yet, but it is known that several of the local lumber firms, as well as some of the out-of-state firms, have received notifications from the board that values are inflated, and asking the owners to file a protest with the board at St. Paul, on Wednesday, and give their reasons why their assessment of land and logs should not be raised.

This notice was received by a few of the lumber companies of the city today, but there are others that have no such notification, and the general impression is that the board has picked out lumber companies here and there that they thought were under assessed. There has been no meeting of the Lake Superior Lumbermen's association to consider this action of the board, though there is a probability that some will be called by the board on Wednesday.

FOR THE FANS. DECLINED BY MORRIS

Congressman Morris Refused to Discuss Issues With Truelson at Bemidji.

GULLUM IS PLEASED

Is Much Gratified With Result of Truelson's Visit to Bemidji.

Henry Truelson has returned from Bemidji, where he spent last Saturday. He is well satisfied with all that he has seen on this short trip, and says that he finds among the voters an enthusiasm that looks well for the cause and for his chances of election. He will be working every minute of the time from now to election day in his canvass. Tomorrow afternoon he will speak at Deer River and in the evening at Bemidji. Wednesday he will speak at Cass Lake, Thursday at Walker and Friday evening at Wadena. Every day will not be busy spent but will be devoted to small towns and settlements.

Mr. Truelson proposes to visit every place in the 25th district that he possibly can. Chairman Gullum is very much pleased over Mr. Truelson's visit to Bemidji. It has been a matter of considerable doubt with him as to the propriety of inviting Mr. Morris to a joint discussion of the issues of the campaign, but this was done at Bemidji and Mr. Morris declined. Chairman Gullum feels that Mr. Morris' declination to meet Mr. Truelson will help the latter greatly, for if it must appear that the congressman is not prepared to participate in a joint discussion of the issues of the campaign.

Mr. Truelson said this morning: "I was asked to go to Bemidji Saturday because the county convention was to be held there. I got there at 10 o'clock in the morning. The city hall had been engaged by the Democrats for their convention and the Democrats had been there for 100 percent in spite of the long distances they had to travel. I was there for a short time in the afternoon, but it was in the evening that I made my regular discussion of the issues of the campaign."

"Page Morris was also there, and the Republicans had hoped to get the hall for the meeting which he was to address. This came to me about it, but I told them that the local committee had engaged it and I had nothing to do with it. After they came to me a couple of times I told them that I could probably find a way out of it. I invited them to have Mr. Morris come free and speak on the same platform with me, devoting the evening to a joint discussion of the issues of the campaign. The chairman of the local committee to whom I made the suggestion was very much pleased at it and went off to Mr. Morris. He came back in a little while and said that Mr. Morris would not meet me. This set the matter before the people in the evening and told them what had occurred, leaving them to guess why Mr. Morris would not meet me."

"The meeting was a very successful one, and we had about the crowd that was at the Morris meeting. Our hall would hold 500 people, and while it was not packed, it was well filled. Mr. Morris came at the court house, which was filled with only about 200 people."

"You can spell it cough, cough, cough, cough, cough, or cough, but the only cure is Minute Cough Cure. Max Wirth."

Nothing was done this morning, but the delay after the new organization is to be called the National Association of Lumbermen, which will be organized in the city of Duluth. The association will be organized in the city of Duluth.

Feathers In Millinery

Fall and Winter Styles Promise That the Very Largest Feathers Will Be In Vogue For Hats.

Breast Plumage For Making Toques. Chenille Is Used as a Texture.

The most salient feature in the new millinery of the month is the variety of modes devised for the arrangement of argus contours and other large, plain or fancy feathers, says the Millinery Trade Review's Paris letter. These feathers promise to be in great vogue throughout the fall and early winter; of such an extent, indeed, that the supply will be far in excess of the demand, at least so far as real argus is concerned. Fancy feathers, of course, can be provided at will; and, with the new processes, which include the extraction of color, as well as the closest imitation of it, imitating natural markings to perfection, constant variety may be obtained.

The most prized are the very largest feathers, of a size not hitherto made use of. Many of them are eighteen inches long, and broad in proportion; but the more usual lengths are from twelve to fifteen inches. Two, a foot long, may be placed on one hat, sweeping round on each side from a bow or puff either side symmetrically in front or slightly on one side.

The feather is, of course, curved so as to adjust it to the shape of the hat.

The very longest feathers are sometimes used to encircle the edge of the brim of a medium-sized hat, the stump and tip almost meeting at the back. This arrangement is chosen for a pale-beige felt hat worn off the face, but not exactly turned up; the contours, a white one, with pale, fawn markings, rests on the edge of the brim so as to give somewhat the appearance of a turban. Behind it, draped on the brim, is a cream lace veil, set off at the back by a row of black velvet, with a small buckle in its center.

More frequently, however, these long contours are chosen as the sole trimming of soft felt undress hats, to which they give a very elegant appearance. For the fall, dark-white and pale-beige hats of this type will be in high fashion. The contours may have its quill and fastened to the right side of the crown, almost at the back, and then, slanting upward, curve over the front of the crown in a bow, a further forward so that the tip rests against the left side of the crown.

Another method consists in bending the tip of the feather into a curl and fastening it to the crown, so that the end of the quill is at the base of

THE NEW AND CORRESPONDING WALKING GOWN.

The walking gown is to be a positive necessity for the wardrobe of smart women this season. The skirt is to be narrow and to cascade, and must be cut with narrow gores and not by the deular pattern. In this extremely smart model we have, a typical example of the style. The narrow skirt is cut with a deep, narrow slit at the bottom, and the skirt is draped over with three horizontal bands of black plush velvet, the skirt overlapping the center gores and decorated at their ends with fancy buttons of gilt and steel. The bands of these straps also are novel and worth comment, being carved in a semicircle at the ends. The jacket of the suit falls over the puffed skirt and is decorated with trimmings of the black plush and fancy buttons. The circular collar which rolls back is of the gray cloth back with heavy stitching and the sleeves are also finished at the cuff in the same way, showing a single strap of the same at the back which extends from the top of the sleeves to the wrist.

And it may have an extra curve at the stem so as to give it a particularly graceful movement as it falls out from the front trimming. Two feathers, one considerably longer than the other, are used with the hat on a hat-crowned felt hat with a double brim, intended to be worn tilted very decidedly to the right; the longer fastened to the right side of the brim by a loop of velvet run through a buckle, and the shorter secured between the brims to the left, the under brim on this side being pinned lengthways underneath the feather, the extremity of which is curved so as to curl down behind the head. This is carried out in light-brown felt, argus plumes and emerald-green velvet.

Another pretty hat, or rather toque, made of a felt plateau of a grayish shade of blue, of medium depth, tied up in a knot in front and sloping down in the back behind where a buckle is placed at the base of the crown) has two broad contours of medium length, blue glass with white, inserted in the knot, the

This superb gown of warm brown velvet is one of the new fall models, and has received much attention. The skirt is cut in a series of gores, which are decorated with mixed white and gold gossamer. The center shows a vest and chainette of tassels not appearing in return velvet which is draped at the waist as a wide, elegant sash, and is ornamented with the same lace applique. The sleeves fall over the wrist and are finished under sleeve of the applique and which corresponds to this purpose, plain contours are mostly chosen, black or the same color as the felt; that is to say, some shade of brown or gray, and, in some instances, bright scarlet or white.

While I am on the subject of undress hats, I must tell you that Leon has introduced a new velvet-curling and automobile hat for the winter, made on the same lines as the plume and lion-sun-ear hats; that is, it is, stitched all over in close set rows. These are made chiefly in dark blue and dark brown, and are trimmed with short contours, a match, or with braids of pheasants or blue-green cocks.

FEATHER-MADE HATS AND TOQUES.

Breast plumage will also be in much request this season for making toques. One of the new arrangements consists in giving the appearance of a twisted turban by placing small argus feathers, velvet turned outward and inward, and increasing the thickness on the left, where they complete the circle of plumage—that of the dark-brown pigeon or ring-necked, of the opulent, of the cock, the pheasant, the parrot or parakeet, of the grebe, etc. Fur toques will, I am assured, be made on the same lines, and chenille being the most appropriate to the purpose. These toques are made with low crowns, covered with plumage.

SOME NEW FRENCH MODELS.

There is a fair demand for birds and a small demand for wings. Among the new models trimmed with wings, I noted a hat with rolled brim in beige felt, trimmed on the right with a drapery of velvet to match, passing through a chaste gold slide, and on the left with two fawn wings. These wings were lifted slightly on a barrette of velvet, to which it attached a third wing. Two examples of mode toques with wings will suffice. One is a hat of automobile-brown felt, lifted on one side, where it rests on a loop of velvet. The other is a hat of mauve. There is an outside drapery of the same on the front and right side of the crown, and the left a very dark bird of fanciful design, with some mauve and grey, a hint about its throat. The other model is a small toque with a narrow brim and broad, black crown, the former is covered with the chenille lace tissue which is going to be so fashionable next season. In this case, white, pearl grey, and black velvet are interwoven so as to form a fair pattern. A fold of wide velvet boxes in the side of the crown, and of which the lace is large and provides a drapery of the chenille to partly conceal the body of a white dove lying in on its back on the left side of the brim.

CHENILLE AS A TEXTURE.

Black chenille has the advantage over colored, and for one model of the latter there are twenty of the former. There is no doubt but that black hats and toques will enjoy immense favor, and all mixtures of black and color, or black and white. The following includes some of the most and latest models in this line. To begin with, a black toque covered with a close network of chenille, and a foundation of black net, turned up at the side, with a somewhat voluminous box of wide black tulle, draped lengthways which is secured a demi-Anazon that curls back over the crown. Another all-black model assumes the shape of a polka-dotted socked hat, with points over each ear and curving over from point to point. This is covered with very closely interlaced black chenille, and from the extremity of the right-hand point dangle several loops of hank velvet. A small gilt brooch is further consists of six black tips, four of which are arranged in a Prince of Waleses' pattern, and the fifth turns forward from the hat, and the sixth curls down over the brim. TAILOR HATS AND RIBBON HATS.

Tailor hats are either round or small Tyrolans, bound about with a wide greenish ribbon or a band of velvet, generally have a couple of straight contours, not exceeding eight inches in length, stuck into the ribbon or fastened over it at an angle of about forty degrees with the base of the crown. CHILD MAY UNITE THEM

How Truxton Beale and Hattie Blaine May Soon Be Remarried.

THE HANDSOME SON

Of the Couple May Be Means of Bringing Them Together.

New York, Sept. 21.—There are overtures going on in society at Washington looking to the remarriage of a couple who some three or four years since came before the public eye by reason of unexpected appearance in the divorce court," said Percy G. Elliot at the Waldorf-Astoria the other night.

"It seems to be generally understood that what is at the bottom of the father's desire for a reconciliation and remarriage is a handsome, sturdy, red-checked youngster to whom he reluctantly all right and tide at the time of the divorce.

"Strangely enough, the father has never been allowed to touch his son, who is the only child, by the way, but has had to content himself with the few glimpses of him in the streets, when he is about as carefully guarded as if he were a prince of the blood royal.

"The father is Hon. Truxton Beale, at one time minister plenipotentiary from the United States to the court of Spain. His daughter, the late Mrs. Hattie Blaine, was the youngest and best looking daughter of the late Hon. James G. Blaine, Hattie's father, and who could well be called him hand her finger whenever she has a notion to try that very interesting process.

"He was very young, hardly 20, when her father died, and her marriage, to Mr. Beale, took place within a year of his death. The marriage was a happy one, and the young couple lived together in a happy home, and was a remarkably grand function. Everybody in society went, and Mrs. Blaine held her own in the matter.

"The marriage came off the following spring, while the Blaine family were still in the city. The marriage was a happy one, and the young couple lived together in a happy home, and was a remarkably grand function. Everybody in society went, and Mrs. Blaine held her own in the matter.

"It was from that place, somewhat over a quarter of a century before, that Mr. Beale had been on the fatal ship, day morning to see the signal waved at him across Lafayette square by Mrs. Blaine's husband, who had been shot Mr. Key on the spot.

"Strangely enough, Mrs. Beale was then living in the Decatur house, where for years past the Beales have made their home, and from which earlier in the century, Commodore Decatur walked forth to meet his death upon the deck of the USS Medusa.

"Of course every one guessed over all this ancient history on the day of the Blaine-Beale wedding, because of the fact that the marriage would turn out to be a happy one. But, however that may have been, it certainly did not turn out to be the least happy one, and within the last twelve months the wife had been compelled to seek the shelter of her mother's home, and of times.

"On several of these occasions she had to make her way out at midnight and in the early hours of the morning, and in a slender sort of clothing than that in which, some women are accustomed to promenade in the vicinity of Lafayette square.

"The one fine morning, young Beale started off for Africa, it was said, to introduce the Standard Bearer among the Kaffirs and Loos, and in double quick time divorce papers were filed. The lady was not a unit after the divorce had been granted, but the young mother, in order to gain absolute sole legal right to her child, was obliged by the father to return in within any future claim whatever to the million dollars that will eventually fall to him as his share of his father's estate. That father, by the way, was the late Gen. Edward Beale, the intimate friend of Gen. Grant, and whom the Grants visited upon numerous occasions, and who, after the general's return from his trip around the world.

"This money will not be divided until the death of Mrs. Beale, who knows very well how to hold on to her inheritance as long as she lives, and who was from the start violently opposed to her son's marriage with one of the Blaine family. There are indeed those who know who refuse to assert that it was this material objection to the marriage which made it such an unhappy one.

"However, this would hardly account for some of the things that finally led to the wife seeking a divorce, but all the same now Mr. Beale now years to possess a very handsome sum, and he is a very young man upon whom he has never even been allowed to bestow a caress and who desires to do so in the worst kind of a way.

"It doesn't matter that he voluntarily gave up all legal right to him in consideration of his never aspiring to share the million in the future. What he wants now is to get to have, but to hold him Mr. Beale has, it would seem, changed his mind in several times, and among these he wishes to be married again to that young wife to whom he walked one lovely spring morning across the park to pledge his faith and honor.

"So he began at Christmas time by sending up all legal right to him in consideration of his never aspiring to share the million in the future. What he wants now is to get to have, but to hold him Mr. Beale has, it would seem, changed his mind in several times, and among these he wishes to be married again to that young wife to whom he walked one lovely spring morning across the park to pledge his faith and honor.

"The statement that the vessels were not much injured below the water line is probably true. Everyone knows that it is impossible for shells to do much damage below the water line. A few inches of water is a great protection. Armored ships are not armored much below the water line, the water being protection enough.

"I hardly think it worth your while to pay much attention to this. You know it is human nature to depreciate what others have done and Mr. Hobson may not have been spotted correctly or in full."

LEADERS OPENING UP.

Salisbury and Balfour Are to Make Statements First.

New York, Sept. 21.—A dispatch to the Tribune from London says: "The leaders have now taken charge of the political campaign on either side. Lord Salisbury is expected to write a letter to some prominent Unionist candidate, and Mr. Balfour will probably do so within thirty-six hours with official explanations of the government reasons for opposing the country."

Campbell-Bannerman and Sir William Harcourt are holding back their addresses until the Unionist leaders state the main issues of the elections.

"Travellers there will be more free in the opposition camp in at present who these veterans open their attack, but at present the country is strong Unionist and seems likely to swing everything before it."

CHAMBERLAIN'S MANIFESTO. Joseph Has Issued a Statement to His Constituents. London, Sept. 21.—The manifesto of Joseph Chamberlain, secretary of state for the colonies and member of parliament for West Birmingham, was issued to his constituents last night. He says: "Our opponents assert that we deliberately provoked a war for which we had no preparation. The first statement is a lie and the second is a gross exaggeration. The war was forced on us by a sudden invasion, while the negotiations continued, the greatest concentration of our part was proceeding."

A Leading Attorney Says
Council Can Close Michigan
Street as Dangerous.

WOULD FORCE PAVING

Tenants Would Bring Owners to Time Quickly If That Were Done.

When street improvements are absolutely necessary the council can compel property owners to petition for the improvement. That, at least, is the opinion of one of Duluth's most prominent attorneys. He says that after careful consideration he finds that the council can declare a street dangerous and board it up. Then tenants will bring such pressure on the property owners that they will be compelled to petition for the street's improvement.

At present the council finds itself in a peculiar position. Michigan street is a thoroughfare, and it is in a condition that is little better than a muddy country road. The members of the council feel it incumbent on them to order the repaving of this street. The new charter provides that the council cannot order an improvement without first being petitioned by 25 per cent of the property owners. In the case of Michigan street, where the new paving is most needed, the property owners say they will not petition for the improvement unless the city agrees to pay for the paving of avenue intersections. The city declines to pay for the paving of these intersections on the ground that municipal finances cannot stand the extra expense at this time, and that it would establish a precedent that would cause the outlay of many thousands of dollars in the future. The Michigan street property owners insist that the council will never get a petition from 25 per cent of them till it is agreed that the city will pay for the intersections.

The council now seeks to have the charter amended by inserting a provision authorizing necessary improvements on a three-fourths vote of all its members. An informal canvass among the fifteen charter commissioners revealed the fact that a majority of them are opposed to giving the council such power. Upon the written petition of a per cent of the legal voters of the city the charter commission is required by law to submit any amendment to the voters, but this means has been considered too slow where the improvements are as necessary as on Michigan street. City officers have been feeling about for some time out of the situation, and they believe they have found it.

A member of the council this morning said that Michigan street was certainly unsafe for traffic and the council would be perfectly justified in boarding up the street and hanging out the danger signs. As the sections to be boarded up would include the commission district, it is argued that property owners would soon be brought to petition for the improvement, though the council much preferred more peaceful measures.

Yesterday afternoon at a special meeting of the municipal conference committee, a number of agents representing Michigan street property owners appeared before the committee to urge an appropriation for the levy of 1900, sufficient to pay for the paving of avenue intersections on that street.

Their argument was that the general public did more to wear out the paving on Michigan and Superior streets than did the owners of property actually abutting on those thoroughfares. Therefore they assumed the city should pay for the repaving of these two streets. Letters were sent to the city council, St. Paul to the effect that in those cities it was customary for the city to pave intersections.

City officers replied to this argument, saying that a precedent would be established by the city being called on to repave all intersections in the future, and the financial condition of the city did not stand that. It was also shown that it would be necessary to dig up ahead on all street paving for about fifteen months in order to get the cost of paving intersections included in the city levy. This would mean the delaying of the Superior and Michigan street paving till late in the year 1902.

At this meeting the board of fire commissioners, through their respective presidents, petitioned the conference committee to include an additional $100,000 in the city levy to go toward the paving of a $400,000 fire tax. The committee decided against the proposition by a decisive vote, and agreed to submit the levy of 1-2 mills to the council as the tax rate for city purposes in the fiscal year of 1901.
